Keeping Apples.

A correspondent asks us how he can keep his winter apples until late in spring, say till the end of May. There is but one answer to make: 1. The apples must be good keepers, free from bruises or blemish. 2. They must be spread out on shelves or packed away in barrels, and kept in an atmosphere of from 40 to 500, better from 40 to 45 0 -- that is at a temperature as equable as possible. Some cellars are just the thing, and preserve them beautifully. Others are too moist Where the is the case a few bushels of stone lime should be used. About all we know of its history is through British channels.

In 1838 the country was ruled by three brothers, the oldest of whom was the famous Dost Mohammed, who had his residence at Babool: He made war on Runjeet Singh, a Punjanb prince under British protection, and England declared war against him as a pretext tor settins a man of their own on the Afghan throne. Cabool was captured in August, 1839, and Dost Mohammed himself surrendered in October

This conquest was followed by insurrection after insurrection, and it required an expenditure of over six million dollars a year to maintain British occupation of the country. Finally a successful revolt occurred in Cabool in 1842, which ended in the capitulation of the English army, which was permitted to leave the country. leaving behind all its artillers and mili tary stores. This was in November and owing to the lutense cold and guerilla attacks, only one Englishman out of a command of 4,500 reached Indla to tell of the disaster. This was avenged a few months after by a torce under Gen. Pollock, Cabool being recaptured in September. 1844, and Dost Mohammed brought back and placed on the throne.
